

If you are going to override the Indiana Law concerning the no call list. Then It should change to allow ONLY companies who are raising funds for not for profit organizations such as police and fire programs who use the money for training, kids programs and retirement. I do not wish to be called by credit card companies or anyone I've done business with in the past. If I want to talk to them I would call them for their services. After talking to many people about this, most seem to agree with my thoughts. My home life has benefited with the quietness it hasn't seen in over a year with the Indiana no call list law. I used to get 4-5 calls everyday with companies calling to sell their products. And from time to time I work from my home so as you can see it was getting very aggerivating. No to mention the irritation I would feel when the solicitor would insist on continuing the high pressure sales pitch after I told them I wasn't interested. I was also cused out and hung up upon on many occasions. You don't get that kind of ignorance from fund raisers who call. They have always treated me with the upmost respect, even when I declined to support them at that time.

Thanks for hearing my thoughts
